HAUPTMANN AGAIN ON STAND; BATTLES WITH PROSECUTOR

Pale of Face and Has Cagy Expression As He Faces Attorney

RESIGNED HIS POSITION

Gave Up Job Because He Got Only $80 Per Month

By James L. Kilgallen
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

COURT ROOM, FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 29.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann resumed the witness stand at 10:05 o'clock this morning for further cross-examination.

Hauptmann, pale-faced, wore a cagy expression as he took his seat in the witness chair and faced the slim, black-haired Attorney General, David T. Wilentz.

Q. (By Wilentz): Now, Mr. Defendant, you said that on April 2, 1932—the night the $50,000 ransom was paid—you had resigned that day.

A. Yes.

Q. You did not resign because you got the $50,000 but because they only wanted to pay you $80 a month?

A. Yes.

In response to other questions, Hauptmann said that he started work the 15th of March, 1932, at the Majestic Apartments in New York and that he received his pay at the end of the month.

Q. If you worked from March 21st to the end of the month, as the employment agency says, you would get $33.33?

A. I guess that would be right.

Hauptmann had been working as a carpenter at the apartments. Hauptmann reiterated that the reason he quit his job was that he got only $80.00 when he was supposed to draw $100.

Q. At the end of March 1932 you had already got your check?

A. Yes.

Q. You knew you were only getting $80.00 and not $100 a month; why did you quit then?

A. I never quit in the middle of the week. I always waited until Saturday. Hauptmann was asked by Wilentz if he knew Violet Sharpe, the maid in the home of the Morrisons at Englewood, N. J. Miss Sharpe committed suicide while the Lindbergh case investigation was in progress.

Hauptmann said he did not know her.

Q. You never heard of Violet Sharpe prior to March 1, 1932?

A. No.

Q. Never knew anyone in the Lindbergh household prior to that date?

A. No.

Although every seat was filled, the court room seemed empty in contrast with its appearance during the past few days when crowds clogged the aisles and blocked the doorways and sat on the window sills. Today, because of Judge Trenchard's order only enough spectators to fill the Court room benches were allowed in. There were only a handful of standing spectators along the left wall.

Q. In May 1932, you bought a radio?

A. Yes.

Q. How much did you pay for it?

A. $400.

Wilentz forced an admission that in July of 1932, then three months after the ransom payment, Hauptmann bought an expensive pair of field glasses.

Q. Didn't you pay $126.00 for these field glasses?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever own field glasses before?

A. Yes.

POPULAR ENTERTAINERS TO APPEAR AT BALL HERE

70% of Profits to Remain in Area for Paralysis Sufferers

AT ST. MARK'S, WED.

All is in readiness for the birthday ball for President Roosevelt which will be held in St. Mark's Auditorium tomorrow evening. This affair is one of a series of over 5000 balls which will be staged throughout the nation, not merely as a tribute to the chief executive, but to raise funds for the purpose of combating the dreaded infantile paralysis disease.

Seventy per cent. of the profits remain in this area for the rehabilitation of infantile paralysis sufferers. The balance will be forwarded to the national committee for the purpose of scientific research work in this field.

Hubert McGinley, chairman of the entertainment committee, has engaged the following artists who will be presented in the form of a floor show: Henrietta Wright, novelty tap dancer; Gaven White, songs with sentiment; Mildred Stevenson, the singing hostess.

Miss Wright and Mr. White have broadcast frequently over radio station WLIT, while Miss Stevenson is presented nightly at the Club Lido.

The committee in charge has extended every possible effort to make this affair as entertaining as possible and promises an enjoyable evening to all who attend.

Move A Fire Plug Which Caused Damage To Autos

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Jan. 29.—A fire plug in front of the Speedway Inn, Lincoln Highway, which long has been considered a menace by the property holder, was removed by the Langhorne Spring Water Company today.

The plug was placed in 1923 when the highway was built. In 1928 the Speedway Inn was erected, and during the past six years the plug has been broken off five times, doing considerable damage to automobiles. The property owner estimates that much business is lost each day because of motorists' knowledge of the menace. The plug was moved to a less prominent position on a side street, nearby.

Twelve Years' Illness Is Fatal to Mrs. J. Bielecki

Mrs. Mary Bielecki, wife of George Bielecki, died at her residence, 240 Hayes street, yesterday. She had been bedridden for the past 12 years. The deceased was 56 years of age.

Relatives and friends are invited to attend the funeral from her late residence, tomorrow, at 10 a. m. High Mass will be said at St. Mark's Church at 11 o'clock, and burial will be made in St. Mark's Cemetery under direction of the W. I. Murphy Estate, funeral directors.

ST. LOUIS.—(INS)—Fifteen minutes after he had completely recovered his eyesight and while he was walking along the street here gratefully "seeing the town" again, John Martin, 75, of Frankford, Mo., was fatally stricken with a cerebral hemorrhage. He died several hours later.

REJUVENATION EXPERIMENTS OF RED LYSATOTHERAPISTS BEGINNING TO SHOW RESULTS

Lindsey Parrott Reveals First Details of Scientific Research Into Construction of Lives

(This is the second of four articles dealing with results of experiments in various fields made by scientists in the Soviet Union under pressure of the Red regime's effort to make its economic scheme work. An International News Service correspondent studied them first-hand.)

By Lindsey Parrott
International News Service Staff Correspondent

MOSCOW, Jan. 29.—(INS)—Her name is not Anna Petrovna, but that is close enough.

At 36, the hair concealed below her snow-white head-dress is just the color of the linen. Her eyes are dim and clouded. Her walk is an unsteady shuffle and the movements of her hands and arms are painful and uncertain. "Simmons disease," rare form of atrophy that doctors call incurable, is what afflicts her. But Anna Petrovna is happy and contented.

Six years ago, after the birth of a child, came the disease. And, as it took its normal course, the woman, rapidly and before her time, grew old and crippled.

Today, against all laws of nature, she is as rapidly growing younger. That her eyes are clouded is no grief to her. A year ago she could not see. Her shuffling walk is a delight. A year ago, she lay in bed, immobile. A year ago, she could not move her arms.

Now, her shrunken cheeks are filling out. Wrinkles are disappearing. Functions of youth, long gone, are hers again. Her weight, since March, is up some sixteen pounds. Doctors have told her that she will be cured of her "incurable" complaint—that they will turn the clock back and that she will be thirty-six again, instead of sixty.

"A true case of rejuvenation," say the doctors. And, in the Experimental Institute of Metabolism and Endocrinology in Moscow Anna Petrovna proudly demonstrates her power to move and look about her.

"Lysatotherapy," is the technical name of the treatment that is bringing Anna Petrovna back from age to youth—a medical process scarcely known outside of Russia, but hailed here as something not far from the universal cure sought by alchemists in the philosophers' stone.

Thousands of men and women, weekly, stand in the frozen courtyard of the sole clinic where "lysatotherapy" is practiced, waiting for their chance to be admitted. More than a dozen diseases, from exema to schizophrenia, or dual personality, habitually are treated at the Institute, with fairly general success.

And Dr. I. N. Kazakov, discoverer of the process and director of the hospital, believes that some day in the future when his "lysatotherapy" has passed out of the experimental stage it may achieve his ambition to extend the average term of human life to 140.

"For," he argues, "in the animals the normal life is seven times the period of development. Only man is an exception. And, since the period of full development of man is twenty years it should be possible, eventually, to extend man's life term to 140."

Simply stated, "lysatotherapy" consists in the injection into the human body of strong concentrates made from the organs of animals, which, in the Kazakov theory, actually "recreate" the damaged human parts.

More than 50 different varieties of concentrates are made at the Institute.

BAR ASSOCIATION TO HOLD ANNUAL SESSION

Devote Entire Evening To Enjoyment of Banquet at Doylestown Inn

THIRTY-THREE PRESENT

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 29.—Election of officers of the Bucks County Bar Association will take place at a meeting to be held here within the next 30 days, but the annual meeting of the lawyers of the county was held here on Saturday night.

There was a brief business session at the Bucks County Court House at which time it was decided to postpone the business of the association until a later date, so that the entire evening could be turned over to the banquet program which was staged at the Doylestown Inn.

Thirty-three members of the Bar attended the banquet. They were: President Judge Hiram H. Keller, Judge Calvin S. Boyer, Henry A. James, Doylestown, vice president of the association; Isaac J. Vanartsdalen, of Doylestown, secretary-treasurer; Webster S. Achey, Oscar O. Bean, Wesley Bunting, Doylestown; John P. Betz, Jr., Bristol; State Senator Clarence J. Buckman, Langhorne; J. Hibbs Buckman, Langhorne; Willard S. Curtin, Morrisville; John L. DuBois, District Attorney; Arthur M. Eastburn, Doylestown; Hugh B. Eastburn, Jr., Bristol; Charles B. Ermentrout, Southampton; C. William Freed, Quakertown; Paul V. Forster, Bristol; Webster Grim, Doylestown; Robert H. Grim, Perkasie; J. Lawrence Grim, Morrisville; J. Kirk Leatherman, Doylestown; Gordon H. Luckenbill, Quakertown; Stace B. McEntee, Doylestown; Charles H. Ortt, Quakertown; Thomas Ross, Colonel George Ross, Doylestown; Louis I. Rubin, Bristol; C. Wilson Roberts, Southampton; Charles W. Roberts, Newtown; William R. Stuckert, Newtown; William H. Satterthwaite, Doylestown; Harry Schalker, Chalfont; Mark Thatcher, Perkasie.

Hansen has also appointed a committee to draw up a new constitution for the local organization. This committee will meet with Martin C. Wright, faculty adviser, and a report will probably be made at a meeting of the local council February 5th. The committee includes: Robert Dobuski, chairman; Richard Burns, Harvey Moore, William Ryan, Shirley Heenan and Herman Turpin.

Sentenced to Walk

For sixty days under court sentence Edward Foster, 16 (above), must walk twelve miles on alternate days from his home in Alexandria, Ind., to the county jail at Anderson, carrying a load of twenty pounds, and make the return trip the following day. He pleaded guilty to robbing a store and the judge gave him his choice of walking or going to jail.

TO START CANVASS FOR PROPERTY IMPROVEMENT

County Chairman Palmer Announces Plans Are About Completed

URGES ALL TO ASSIST

An important meeting of the Bristol Better Housing Campaign will be held tonight at eight o'clock in the Elks Club, according to Chauncey E. Stoneback, Jr., chairman of the local committee.

"Every person who is connected in any way with this movement is requested to be present. There is a lot of work to be done in this section on home modernization and repairing and it is our plan to make this campaign a success," said the general chairman.

County chairman Horace J. Palmer, South Langhorne, states that "within a few days a house to house canvass of the entire county will be made to encourage everyone to do all necessary repairs, alterations or improvements to their property at this time. These canvassers will also give any information regarding the Federal Housing Act loans. These are character loans and may run for a period up to 36 months and be paid off monthly in small installments at a low rate of interest.

"There will be 120 persons taken from the unemployed to make this canvass. All persons will be schooled concerning the National Housing act before they are sent out. Everyone is urged to call at one of the campaign offices which are located in the following towns: South Langhorne, Doylestown and Perkasie, where they will receive any information regarding loans made possible by this act.

"Since re-employment plays a large part in this campaign and is one of the main objects of the campaign, every person is urged to patronize local business houses and local mechanics, and by doing this will not only be relieving the unemployment situation in their town but will be saving money on any repairs they wish to make. Ask at your nearest Better Housing Office," Mr. Palmer stated, "for the names of those who are co-operating in this campaign. Every person is asked also to co-operate with the Better Housing Campaign in their town. See their local chairman for local activities that may interest them."

POISON LIQUOR KILLS 21

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 29.—Poisonous liquor brought an extended holiday for death in central New York today when the toll of lives from the fatal booze reached 24. Eight names were added to the death list of the Gloversville area this morning. More than 12 persons are in Utica and Gloversville hospitals, probably fatally stricken by the death dealing liquor. After the Gloversville deaths, police went to the restaurant of Mrs. Mary Dirrco and said they seized liquor that "undoubtedly contained some kind of poison." Mrs. Dirrco was held while police continued their investigation.

NAVAL PLANE DROPS FOOD TO FAMILY

Lakehurst, N. J., Jan. 29.—A naval plane, piloted by Chief Petty Officer W. F. Wiley, took off from the air station here today to succor a family of four facing possible death by starvation only 60 miles from Broadway. The plane bore food supplies attached to two parachutes which were to be released from the sky above the family home, isolated from civilization by huge snow drifts.

SEVERAL SLIGHTLY INJURED

Newark, N. J., Jan. 29.—An undetermined number of passengers were reported injured slightly today when a suburban passenger train of the Delaware and Lackawanna Railroad crashed into the rear of another train of the same line at the Harrison draw-bridge near here. None of the injuries were believed to be serious. They were reported to consist of cuts by flying glass. Engineer Black of the train which rammed the other was rushed to a hospital reported to be suffering from severe injuries. Two trains were drawn up, one behind the other when the third crashed into the second. Service on three of the four tracks was tied up.

RIFLE HOTEL OFFICE

Philadelphia, Jan. 29.—Two masked bandits early today rifled a hotel office here of $450 in cash and checks in one of a series of robberies that netted them $600. At the Marlyn Hotel, the gunmen locked Hazleton Staats, the night manager, and a watchman in telephone booths, scooped up currency and checks and dashed from the building. Later they robbed a drug store of $120 in cash, and in a third hold-up stole $32 from the till of a cigar store.

GAS KILLS THREE

New York City, Jan. 29.—Disconnection of a rubber tube attached to a small kitchen gas heater today brought death to three persons in a two-room tenement on the lower east side. The bodies were discovered by a policeman who broke down the apartment door when notified by other tenants of the odor of gas throughout the building.

TWO BURNED TO DEATH

Philadelphia, Jan. 29.—The charred bodies of an 84-year-old invalid woman and her daughter were recovered early today from the smoldering ruins of their fire-swept home in West Philadelphia. The victims were Mrs. Sally George, bed-ridden since a heart attack several months ago, and Mrs. Minnie Weber, 45, the only occupants of the house. In the hallway firemen found the body of Mrs. Weber who is believed to have sacrificed her life in a vain effort to rescue her mother. The latter's body was found part way up the stairs leading to the second floor.

Those present: Alice and Robert Neill, Joan and Kermit Morris, Robert Donaldson, Thomas Feaster, Loretta Lovett, Dolores and Marvin Walters, Harry Campbell, Rose Marie Moore, Edgar and Elmer Bleakney, Hope Knochla.

DOUBLE DWELLING AT S. LANGHORNE DAMAGED BY FIRE

Blaze Started by Torch Being Used to Thaw Out Pipes

ESTIMATE LOSS AT $1500

Firemen at Scene for Nearly One Hour Fighting Blaze

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Jan. 29.—The second double-house to be afire in this borough within a week was damaged by fire yesterday afternoon, with a loss of approximately $1500 ensuing.

The blaze started in the property owned and occupied by Albert Baum where a torch was being used to thaw frozen water pipes under the kitchen floor.

The framework caught fire and the blaze quickly swept up through the partition, on through the second floor and attic, and to the roof. The roof and attic of the side of the house occupied by Baum were badly burned, and considerable damage was done by water both in the Baum section of the property, and in the portion of the dwelling occupied by Frank Sodano. The houses are located on Woodland avenue.

Mr. Baum was at home at the time of the fire, although his wife was away at her employment. Both the Sodano and Baum families were forced to vacate until temporary repairs are made. Contents of both homes were considerably damaged by water.

Firemen from the South Langhorne, Hulmeville, and Langhorne companies, who responded, were aided by excellent supply of water from the hydrants. The blaze started at 4:20, and one hour later was practically out. Insurance is carried on both houses, and also on the contents in the Sodano property.

Bucks County Fire Marshal William L. Stackhouse, Hulmeville, investigated.

Brother and Sister Plan Lengthy Trip To Coast

Edward Lynn, Jr., New York, and Miss Sara Lynn, the popular cashier of the Grand Theatre, son and daughter of Justice of the Peace and Mrs. Edward Lynn, 150 Otter street, expect to leave New York on Thursday on the steamer "President Cleveland" for an extended trip to Cuba, the canal zone and California. They will first pay a visit to Havana for several days and then cross the Caribbean Sea to Cristobal, take in the sights through the Panama Canal with another stop at Balboa. They will proceed to Los Angeles, then to San Francisco where they will visit places of interest, including the Yosemite Valley, from where they will return to Los Angeles for a month's visit, including the moving picture studios at Hollywood, Beverly Hills, San Diego, Agua Caliente and Catalina Island, after which they will spend a week at Palm Springs, Calif., the vacation resort in the desert which is so popular with the movie stars. They will then tour overland by rail, stopping for short visits in Tucson, Ariz., El Paso and San Antonio, Texas, Mexico, New Orleans, Memphis, Tenn., Chicago, Detroit, Toronto, Buffalo, Niagara Falls and New York. They expect to return about April 1st.

Miss Lynn and brother have been receiving the best wishes of their many friends for a pleasant and enjoyable sojourn in the land of sunshine. They will carry with them a "movie" camera and take pictures of the many places of interest to show their friends upon their return, and in fact while they are still away their friends will be able to see them in action in the scenes which they will dispatch home while they are still enjoying themselves in the tropics.

Visitor Taken Ill Here Dies at Home of Mrs. Silk

Taken ill while visiting here, John McDowell died yesterday at the home of Mrs. Katherine Silk, Jefferson avenue.

A resident of Newark, N. J., Mr. McDowell was the son of the late Hugh and Ellen McDowell. He had been ill for a few weeks.

The funeral will occur from the funeral home of the William I. Murphy Estate, Jefferson avenue, tomorrow at nine a. m., with Solemn Mass of Requiem at St. Mark's Church at 10 o'clock. Burial will be made in St. Mark's Cemetery.

FINE, BIG PRIZES

The card party to be sponsored by the women of St. Mark's parish in St. Mark's hall, this evening, will attract many, it is believed. Three tons of coal will be the big prizes, and the list of 200 will include: three lamps, room-size rug, electric clock, hand-made quilt, silver mesh evening bag, groceries, hand-made sweater, etc. Pinocchio and "500" will be played, with games getting underway at 8:45 sharp. Late comers will be given a score.

INEXCUSABLE

University graduates as a whole, according to a university director of physical training, are shockingly deficient in knowledge of health and disease and entertain many grotesque conceptions of such matters.

Close observation has disclosed to him that college and university students are large buyers of worthless patent medicines and are highly susceptible to cults and quacks. For this he says the schools are to blame.

He differs from those who argue that it is not the business of institutions of higher learning to instruct students in the care of their health. Instead of having less instruction of this sort he would have more.

Colleges and universities should not have to shoulder this added burden nor would they have to if the public schools and parents concerned themselves more with the instruction of the child in the fundamental rules of good mental and physical health. There is no excuse for ignorance of hygiene.

But as long as we continue behaving like human beings few persons will guard their health until disease threatens and the average parent will leave to the schools the chore of teaching the child the fundamental laws of health.

America boasts of its sanitation and hospitals and doctors and disease control and yet it permits all but a few to reach maturity knowing less about their bodies and minds than they know about baseball stars and All-American eleven.

WAR COSTS PLENTY!

In the detailed annual report of the United States treasury, Secretary Morgenthau itemizes the cost of the World war to this country. The total is officially set at upwards of $50,000,000,000! Billions, mind you!

The war closed in 1918 but there were some odds and ends to clean up. Costs up to June 30, 1921, were estimated by the secretary of the treasury at $27,729,000,000. Interest on war debt is given as $9,557,000,000; veterans administration, $6,391,000,000, and settlement of war claims, $88,000,000.

And of course, there is the item of $12,000,000,000 loaned to foreign nations and not being repaid with much promptness.

Just what we got for the investment of such huge sums is not unanimously agreed.

THE BEER-PORK SWAP

Larger sales of American pork and lard in Germany depend on larger imports of German beer by the United States. So, the tariff commission having recommended it, President Roosevelt orders our tariff rate on beer cut from $1 to 50 cents a gallon.

More U. S. pork products will be sold in Germany, helping our corn states. More German beer will be imported, helping Germany. With smooth imported brews in the restaurants at pre-prohibition prices of 15 to 20 cents a large stein, the prices of domestic beer will be held down and its quality forced up.

Picard says that from the stratosphere the world resembles a checkerboard. All we know is that it has been a tough decade on occupants of the king row.

WANTS DEATH CERTIFICATE

MANILA—(INS)—"No death certificate, no marriage certificate" was the dilemma confronting an aged couple who appeared before the Justice of the Peace at Guagua, Pampanga. They were Narciso Torres, eighty-five, and Victoria Arguelles, aged 74. They both blushing admitted having been married previously, but when asked for the death certificates of their respective spouses, neither of them could produce them. The Justice refused to perform the ceremony.

"THE LADY DANCES" by MARGE STANLEY

SYNOPSIS

In search of adventure, Mark Talbot sails from San Francisco aboard the S.S. "Orient" bound for Honolulu. He meets Vanya Prokova, beautiful dancer, who is being deported. She ignores him. Mark follows Vanya to Tongatabu in the South Seas trying to convince himself that seeing her in her dance hall environment will cure his infatuation. Percy Loring, a beachcomber, informs Mark that Vanya dances at Pearly Shene's Diver's Helmet when the ships are in but, at the present time, she is inland with the natives. Talbot takes Mark to a native festival. They hide in the bushes and watch the ceremonies. Mark utters an exclamation upon seeing Vanya, revealing his and Loring's presence to the natives. They are captured but Vanya intercedes for them and accompanies the pair back through the woods still retaining her frigid attitude. Mark is angry with himself for his interest in her and for the embarrassment of accepting her aid in his trouble. A cobra in their path causes Vanya to go close to Mark for protection. He overcomes the desire to take her in his arms. Next day, Vanya will not accept Mark's thanks; she suggests that he leave her and join Loring. His anger aroused, Mark retorts: "The company of Loring is a distinct improvement over that of a dancer in Pearly Shene's dive." The remark hurts Vanya. Mark tells Loring he will go to see Vanya dance that night just for the joy of seeing her trying to please people. Despite himself, Mark is filled with a strange emotion when Vanya sings and dances. Vanya accepts Mark's invitation to sit at his table. Her hostile attitude disappears and she is very friendly. Mark tells her that she is the reason for his presence in Tongatabu.

CHAPTER XVIII

Suddenly a clang of chords from the piano diverted her attention. "I'm sorry—I have to go on," she remarked, rising.

"Again?" asked Mark, rising with her.

"As long as paying customers continue to pay." She glanced at her costume. "I intended to sing," she observed ruefully, "but I suppose I'll have to dance."

"You'll come back to the table?" asked Mark.

Vanya gave him a serious smile, but made no answer as she made her way among the tables toward the piano.

Loring, a little red of eye but still steady, came over to join Mark. "Your bill is nominal," he said. "I've been very conservative."

Mark made no answer. His eyes were fixed on Vanya as she dropped her robe, and stepped forth again in her revealing costume, trim, slender, and graceful.

Her dance this time was a congeries of native steps and postures; the experienced sailors recognized its import and the drum-like rhythm, and marked time with stamping feet and clapping palms. But to Mark, the dance was negligible; it was the lithe grace of Vanya that held him, the agile poise of her body, the suppleness of her slim waist, the flash of her silk-clad limbs.

The conclusion brought more than usual applause; the sound broke on Mark's ears as a startling concussion, so rapt had he become, so engrossed in the Venus-like vitality of Vanya.

She bowed, draped her robe about her, and prepared to sing as an encore.

"Did you notice Shene?" queried Loring.

"I saw him watching us," Mark nodded. "For a while I thought he might interfere."

"Not he! Your little exploit will be talked about in waterfront hang-outs. Vanya's first friend under sixty, that's advertising!" The beachcomber grinned. "And that accounts for her improved reception, too. Wait until her song's finished."

Another burst of applause greeted the conclusion of the girl's song. Shouted invitations rose from all parts of the hall. Vanya acknowledged the applause with bows and a puzzled smile. Amid the acclaim she walked quickly through the crowd to Mark's place.

her. "It's an admission that you're human."

There began a noticeable thinning out of the crowd. Reeling sailors staggered one by one in the direction of the door.

"How about that story?" queried Mark.

"Why not, after all?" asked the girl. "If you've patience to listen, I've patience to tell."

"All out!" bawled Pearly Shene at the bar, "I'm closing up!"

"That needn't disturb us," assured Mark, as Shene's bellow of "All out" sounded. "We'll talk outside."

"I don't know," said Vanya doubtfully. "I have a reputation to maintain. It's why Shene pays me a pitance more than the others."

"Loring can chaperon us," "Not with my consent."

"You don't like him, do you?" The girl shrugged. "We'll sit on the point. There's a moon, and we'll be in plain sight."

Loring, taking a last drink at the bar, gave them a red-eyed grin. Mark felt an impatient disgust at the implication of the leer.

"You're drunk," he observed in disfavor.

"Only with liquor," sneered the other.

"A beast!" said Vanya as they passed into the brilliant night.

"No. A tragedy," replied Mark, gazing at the luminous stars of the under-half of the sky. Like a crucifix of blue diamonds gleamed the Southern Cross, and the Clouds of Magellan, that galaxy of a million stars, swung over the restless ocean. They both scanned the luminous skies.

"An illusion of peace," sighed the girl, dropping to a seat on a rock. "Only an illusion. Life can be very cruel under these skies."

"No more cruel than under the North Star."

Vanya dropped the robe from her shoulders, baring her throat to the sultry night breeze. Mark found himself gazing at her profile and thinking again of her beauty, and the way the moonlight etched it against the dark background of island hills.

"Am I going to hear that story of yours?" asked Mark finally. He shifted his position, so that her head was against the sky.

"Well," said Vanya slowly. "I was born in Russia. You must have guessed that, if only from my name."

Mark nodded silently.

"Actually I'm a Georgian. My home, where my family has always lived, was in Georgia—haven't you a Georgia in the United States?"

"Yes," said Mark quietly.

"Our Georgia is a splendid mountainous country like—like nothing I can think of in Europe. More glorious than Switzerland and the Alps. It's in Asia, you know, in Siberia."

either, it was a four thousand mile trip each way, and they couldn't give him a long enough furlough."

"Lord!" said Mark. "That's as far away from home as I was in France."

"Then, you know, the Czar fell. There was a short time under Kerensky when we thought our property was safe. But only a short time. There came the Red Revolution, and of course we were White Russians."

"Siberia was white for a while, wasn't it?"

"Just for a few months, under the Cossack rule. Then the peasants, the moujiks, that I had played with, that I knew by name, turned against us—my mother and I. We had a leave, smuggled out at night by a few friendly ones. We managed to get to the Chinese border safely, but we brought almost nothing of value. We couldn't—things happened too fast."

"I should think so!" said Mark. "We got to Harbin, in Manchuria. There was a colony of White Russians there, but all, like ourselves, ruined by the Revolution, and barely managing to exist."

"Well, we had to live somehow. I was nineteen, and I liked dancing. I'd studied it in London and Paris, and—I managed to find work in a sort of cabaret, a French place. But Mother wasn't well, and after almost a year, she died."

"Was she all your family?" asked Mark.

"All. And after a while, I worked in Canton, and then in Singapore—it's not a life I like to recall."

"But how did you end up here?"

"I had an offer from Pearly Shene; it sounded like better pay, and I came. It was too late when I discovered his figuring wasn't in gold but Mex."

"That's the regular currency in these parts," said Mark.

"I didn't know that then. And so I landed here—the worst place of them all! Even Singapore was better."

"What about your trip to the States?"

"I wanted to get into America," said Vanya. "I thought that if I could once enter the States, I'd be safe from—this sort of thing. It seemed almost like Paradise—a great, rich, civilized country where life was so assured, so easy! So I saved the passage money, tried, and—failed."

"Why?" queried Mark.

"Don't you see? I'm not a Russian citizen, I'm not an English citizen, I had no passport; I'm literally without a country! I can never get into any civilized nation."

"But Good Lord!" exclaimed Mark. "Why didn't you try the Governor at Taulanga. Couldn't he certify you? Tonga's British."

"Do you think I didn't try? I spent days, literally days, at the Residency trying to see him, and when I did, he patted my cheek, and told me very politely that there wasn't a thing he could do. So—I tried in spite of him, and failed."

She paused a moment, staring moodily out over the ocean.

"That's why I was so certain you couldn't help me. Nobody could, less than a President or a Member of Parliament, or whatever you call your law-makers!"

She rose; the flowered covering fell about her feet, and for a moment she stood with her breath-taking form silhouetted against the ocean horizon. Then she gathered her robe about her, and turned silently toward the Cove.

Mark followed pondering. At the end of the coral spit he fell into step beside her.

That's the best story I've heard in the whole island world," he said.

Vanya stopped suddenly, facing him. Her black eyes blazed up at him with sudden anger.

"You don't believe me!" she cried.

"Then tell me how you saved money for passage to America!" flared Mark. "Tell me that! On Shene's pay, I suppose!"

"Oh!" said the girl in a half-sob of anger, "you're—you're unbearable!"

She fled abruptly toward the Diver's Helmet. Mark turned and walked over to Loring's table; the beachcomber snored peacefully beneath it. Mark drew back his foot, and kicked the sprawled figure sharply; Loring opened a dazed and befuddled eye.

"I don't know whether to believe her!" said Mark fiercely. "I don't know whether she's lying."

"Try the acid test," murmured Loring sleepily, as he resumed his slumbers.

Advertisements are a guide to value

EXPERTS can roughly estimate the value of a product by looking at it. More accurately, by handling and examining it. Its appearance, its texture, the "feel" and the balance of it all mean something to their trained eyes and fingers.

But no one person can be an expert on steel, brass, wood, leather, foodstuffs, fabrics, and all of the materials that make up a list of personal purchases. And even experts are fooled, sometimes, by concealed flaws and imperfections.

There is a surer index of value than the senses of sight and touch . . . knowledge of the maker's name and for what it stands. Here is the most certain method, except that of actual use, for judging the value of any manufactured goods. Here is the only guarantee against careless workmanship, or the use of shoddy materials.

This is one important reason why it pays to read advertisements and to buy advertised goods. The product that is advertised is worthy of your confidence.

Merchandise must be good or it could not be consistently advertised. Buy advertised goods.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

By ANN PAGE

WINTER weather throughout the country has slowed production and movement of most perishable foodstuffs. A severe freeze in Texas has seriously damaged the spinach, broccoli, beet and carrot crops of that region so that higher prices may be looked for. Many vegetables, however, are plentiful and either cheap or moderately priced—among them potatoes, turnips, parsnips, cabbage, kale, cauliflower and green peas.

Grapefruit, navel oranges and apples are the outstanding fruits, though strawberries are beginning to be plentiful and very moderate in cost.

Meats continue high. Butter and eggs are higher, though eggs will be lower as production increases and shipping conditions improve.

Here are three menu suggestions which are timely and suited to three budget levels:

Low Cost Dinner

Pan-broiled Chopped Beef
Baked Potatoes
Creamed Parsnips
Bread and Butter
Sliced Oranges and Bananas
Tea or Coffee

Medium Cost Dinner

Fried Chicken New Potatoes
Green Peas
Bread and Butter
Orange Cream Pie
Tea or Coffee

Very Special Dinner

Bouillon Pan-browned Potatoes
Broccoli with Lemon Butter
Tomato and Lettuce Salad
Hot Rolls and Butter
Ice Cream with Strawberries
Coffee

TO ADVERTISE

Use A Space Like This — Effective, Economical

How do you CHOOSE?

EVERY time you make a purchase you make a choice.

Buying a certain product may be so much a matter of habit that you don't realize you are choosing. But the fact remains that in accepting one brand of goods you are always rejecting others; and the satisfaction you get from what you buy depends on the knowledge of quality and values that guides your selection.

How do you know which bed-sheets, or which roofing material, or which radio will give you service you require? You can't personally test everything you buy and compare it with all the other products in its class. But there is a way to find out which brand fits your needs.

The people who are most successful in their buying—who achieve the highest percentage of satisfaction from the things they own and use—are those who consistently read the advertising columns, and buy consistently advertised goods.

Choosing isn't just "guessing" when you follow the guidance of the advertisements.

You can depend on advertised goods.

It pays to read the advertisements.

DRESSEN SNAGS INFANT INFELD

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 29.—(INS)—The Cincinnati Reds, who finished up in the cellar of the National League last year, promise to become the "school-boy" team of major league baseball as Manager Charley Dressen carries out the first pledge he made when he was appointed to manage the Redlegs.

Dressen, who took over the reins in mid-season, told the fans he was not going to lead the team with "has-beens" of baseball but seek out and hire youthful talent.

His hunt for youth has cost Owner Powell Crosley about $125,000 but the Reds now can boast of four young infielders whose ages average 23 and whose batting averages are very, very much higher. The four acquired by the Reds are:

Johnny Mize, 21, from Rochester of the International League. Alex Kumpouris, 22, from Sacramento of the Pacific Coast circuit. Lew Riggs, 24, from Columbus of the American Association, and Bill Myers, 24, from the Giants of the national loop.

Of course, such veterans as Sunny Jim Bottomley, Tony Plot, Gordon Slade and others are still around the Red lot and the youngsters will have to exhibit plenty of talent before they are assigned a regular berth.

Crosley was reported to have plunked down $55,000 in cash for Mize, a first baseman. He bats from the South, towers six feet and three inches and weighs 195 pounds. Despite the fact that injuries kept him out of 65 games last year, he hit 340 in 89 games, drove in 67 runs and pounded out 17 four-base clouts. The St. Louis Cards had strings on him and the cash went to that team.

Kumpouris is a second baseman and cost the Reds $23,000. He bats and throws right handed and earned a .275 average at the plate. He came to the Reds late last season from Sacramento and is a native of that city.

Riggs was acquired by the local nine at a reported cost of $20,000. Like Mize, he belonged to the Cardinals although playing with the Columbus double-A club. His batting average in 1934 was .277 and he is a sparkling third sacker with a "shot gun" arm.

The Reds were able to round out their infant-infield with shortstop Myers, mainly because the Giants were able to acquire Dick Bartell of the Phillies. The deal that brought Myers here sent Mark Koenig and Pitcher Allyn Sout to the New Yorkers.

The infield represents an outlay of about $125,000 and the Reds also spent another $20,000 for Ival Goodman, an outfielder from Rochester.

BRISTOL HIGH QUINTET OUT AFTER JINX TONIGHT

By Jack Orr
B. H. S. Press Representative
Unable to penetrate the "jinx" which has hovered over them all season the Bristol Bunnies battle the Blue and White of Burlington on the local court tonight.

Six consecutive times the Cardinal and Gray have fallen by the wayside but tonight a shakeup in the line-up may be enough to furnish a surprise victory for the Bristol fans.

"Jim" Spencer, who has been playing a great game at center, has been moved from the pivot post to forward. Harry Berry is now occupying Spencer's spot.

Berry will be pitted against "Jim" O'Farrow, colored flash, who is reputed to be the main offense of the Blue and White beside being a fine shot.

The five Burlington starters are all football men who reported directly from the gridiron squad.

The preliminary game will see the Jayvees of Bristol High attempt to annex their second triumph of the campaign.

At the intermissions the Bristol High gym team will give a "three ring circus" effect as they perform on a trio of pieces at the same time. The entire thirty members of the team will be on exhibition this evening.

Line-up:		Bristol H. S.
Pitkoe	forward	Carnvale	center
Chemingo	forward	Spencer	center
O'Farrow	center	Berry	guard
Stansky	guard	Schiffer	guard
Bozarth	guard	Booze	guard
Burlington substitutions: Woyick, Rigg, Arenz.		Bristol substitutions: Moran, Niccol, Orzai.
Tap-off: 7:30 sharp.

Rejuvenation Experiments Beginning to Show Results

stiffening of the joints, remained unhelped by lysatotherapy.

Blindness was arrested in three out of 30 cases of glaucoma, an ailment called completely incurable.

Thirty-one patients out of 103 recovered completely from epilepsy and eight out of 57 were cured of schizophrenia.

Now the Institute is experimenting with lysatotherapy as a means for the relief or cure of cancer, and, though no elaborate claims are made, it is asserted that experiments show promise.

In 18 days, one cancer patient gained 16 pounds weight and a cancerous swelling on his face seemed to have shrunk. In yet another case, that of a woman, a cancer of the jawbone seemed to have been arrested.

It is too early, still, to say that cancer definitely can be arrested by the treatment, but there are hopes.

Meanwhile, the Soviet government, insisting on practical results, has checked up on the former patients of Dr. Kasakov in Moscow factories. Five months after the completion of the treatment, according to official figures, eighty per cent retained the result and the number of days lost from work decreased 95 per cent comparing equal intervals of time before and after seeing Kasakov.

(Mr. Parrott's extraordinary series will be continued tomorrow.)

HOLLYWOOD—Being an heiress is not all thrills. Grace Bradley, red-haired Paramount actress, has had to move three times to escape cranks who want to help spend the $250,000 estate left her by her grandfather, William Schrader, the late rubber magnate.

Since the story of her inheritance was printed, Grace's fan mail has changed completely in tone. Admirers used to write praising her acting. Now, nine-tenths of the letters are proposals of marriage or get-rich-quick schemes.

A more sinister note has crept in recently with the receipt of three letters threatening violence unless demands for money are met.

Grace lives with her mother, and the two women are growing a bit frightened. They have just moved for the third time and are trying to keep their address secret.

Oddly enough, many of the letter writers express resentment that the actress wants to continue her career. This is the toughest of all. Especially as Grace is getting her first real lead in the Ben Bernie picture, "Stolen Harmony."

The rumor gains strength here that Ernst Lubitsch may not direct Marlene Dietrich after all. No story has been found, and it is whispered that the German star is reluctant, even now, to change from Josef von Sternberg.

The split seems definite, however, as far as he is concerned. At least, von Sternberg offered to bet me 100 to one that he doesn't direct Dietrich again for the next five years.

If nothing else, the opening of the Santa Anita track has changed Hollywood's official greeting from "What's new?" to "How did you do at the races?"

Funnier answer to date was made the other day by Mervyn Leroy. "Well," said the diminutive director, "I won the first six races and would have won the last two, if I'd had any money left to bet on it."

Here's a queer twist of fate. Joel McCrea's stand-in for "Private Worlds" is an ex-star of silent days, whom Joel once served in the same capacity.

Arnold Grey is the stand-in's name. Remember when he, Priscilla Dean and Marguerite de la Motte used to be important players in the old P. D. C. outfit?

In those days, Joel was a tall college boy with a passion for acting. For, after three days on the set, he was asked to double up and also play a part in the picture.

The two men became friends, and when fate reversed their fortunes, Joel recently repaid the old favor. And, through the screen, for, after three days on the set, he was asked to double up and also play a part in the picture.

What studio has promised instant dismissal for any member of a current location troupe who takes a drink with a certain actor?

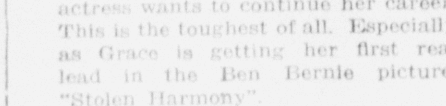

KNICK-KNACKS—The reconciliation of Lupe Velez and Johnny Weissmuller was almost engineered the other night when the two met at the Clover club, had a long talk and left the place together.

It was a tough blow to Herr Reinhardt, having Mickey Rooney break his leg while out tobogganing, but Warners now say they won't lose any time by the mishap. . . .

"Smokey" Joe Lillard, colored professional football star, battles on the side for Leroy Prinz, Paramount dance director. . . . It's Aunt Arlene Judge now. Her brother, John Ormond Judge, has just become the nose of an eight-pound boy. . . .

When Josephine Hutchinson eloped with Jimmy Townsend, Hollywood agent, she puzzled registry officials by signing the license, Josephine Bell. But it's no mystery. That's her former married name. . . . Joe Morrison cleaned up at Caliente over the weekend to the tune of plenty of dough. . . . And, to anyone concerned, look out for Peggy Fears' chauffeur. He is Jim Menzies, former British marine, who won a flock of medals during the war.

BEHIND THE SCENES AT HARRISBURG

HARRISBURG, Jan. 29.—The Democratic bosses have done all in their power to effectively "gag" the Republicans of the House. They have gone to the extent of revising the rules, so that even the most urgent of resolutions must take the same legislative procedure as a bill, giving the Democrats opportunity to refer each of these to "pickling" committees, where they can be held indefinitely, saving Democrats from the embarrassment of being forced to vote against popular measures.

When the Republican House members heard what was afoot they hurriedly took their troubles to the House rules committee, only to find that the Democrats had given the Republicans absolutely no representation on this important committee.

The inconsistency of the Democrats lies in the fact that Hiram G. Andrews, of Cambria, who framed the "gag" and "pickling" rules and who defended them on the floor of the House, used to be correspondent for the old Philadelphia North American in the Legislature, and as such was one of the most vigorous opponents of all attempts to throttle the Democratic minority. It was Andrews, strangely enough, who took the rules against which he used to complain and rewrote them so as to force a "gag" into the mouth of every Republican and making it possible for the Democrats to "pickle," if they so desire, every Republican bill.

When Governor Earle's bill for the revamping of the State Constitution was before the House last week, it was made entirely clear by Republican members that they are not trying to prevent constitutional revision, but that they desire the public to be fully informed as to what is contemplated and given ample opportunity to be heard on the subject.

Representative Morton Witkin, chairman of the House steering committee, drew attention to the fact that Democratic floor leader Ruth had demanded "more time" for the consideration of a 288-word resolution that had been before the House for a week, but was asking that the Republicans vote in favor of the revision bill after only twelve minutes' consideration.

"This is the most important measure to come before the Legislature," Witkin said. "It will affect the lives of every individual in the Commonwealth for years to come, and yet the Democrats demand that it be rushed through without giving the members opportunity to study it."

Ruth still insisted that the "orders" of the Democratic bosses be obeyed. Representative Turner, of Delaware, introduced an amendment changing the date for the constitutional election, by which more than $600,000, he said, would be saved the taxpayers. But a little thing like expenses meant nothing to the Democrats. Expense or no expense they demanded the measure be passed. Turner's amendment was defeated. He had a number of others, but he withdrew them because he said it was useless to waste the time of the House.

Representative Sowers, Philadelphia, drew attention to the fact that the bill is so carelessly drawn that if passed in its present form it will disfranchise thousands of voters who have moved from one district to another since last registration day. But Floor Leader Ruth didn't care at all for that. He wanted the bill passed, and he forced it through regardless of imperfections or requests of various large groups that they be allowed to express their views on it before a committee.
